Your typed application (“Main Application”) should address the following criteria, on which your application will be assessed:

1. The value to yourself – how will the activities proposed promote your career and help you develop as a professional in the energy sector
2. The value to society – how will the activities also be of value to the wider community?
3. The value for AIE – is the cost to the AIE proportional to the value. Is this expenditure consistent with the objectives of the AIE?

The quality of your application will also contribute to the assessment. Attach additional documentation if necessary (e.g. letters of invitation, references, conference details) but do not exceed 10 pages in total including this Summary Application Form.

All applications should be submitted in electronic form (preferably pdf or text document) by email. This application form should be filled in, signed and either scanned to pdf or saved as a text document, and be submitted with your Main Application.

Applicants must declare they have been a financial AIE member for at least 12 months and are under 35 years of age as of the date of application:

I declare that I am a financial member of the Australian Institute of Energy and agree to be bound by the conditions of entry.
